1 Hordhac – Introduction

This document serves as a comprehensive guide for learners of the Somali language, designed to support both self-study and community-based instruction.

It is a central hub for:

- Structured study notes organized by theme
- Essential vocabulary relevant to everyday life
- Practice exercises for speaking, listening, reading, and writing
- Cultural and generational engagement, including Somali proverbs and dialogues
- Progress tracking for students over the course of their learning

The course is intended for learners at all levels and is structured as a series of thematic units that build gradually toward fluency. It is especially suited for summer intensives or weekend community classes.

Why Somali Matters

For many Somali youth raised in the West, the inability to speak their mother tongue is a source of quiet grief — a feeling of being cut off from elders, stories, and the untranslatable richness of home.

This course is not just about grammar and vocabulary. It's about reconnection. It's about helping a generation recover what was almost lost — and proudly carry it forward.

Oral Heritage Lives Through Language

Somali has been called a “nation of poets” — not because every Somali writes books, but because the oral transmission of wisdom, history, and values has traditionally been carried through language.

Learning Somali is not just learning a language — it's entering a cultural archive.

Language and Identity

When a generation loses its tongue, it also loses its memory.

Preserving Somali is preserving identity — not only for individuals, but for families, mosques, and communities seeking continuity.

Somali Proverb

Nin aan dhul marin, dhaayo ma leh.

He who has not traveled has no eyes.

This widely quoted proverb reminds learners that exposure expands understanding — just as travel opens the eyes, language opens doors to culture, connection, and insight.

1.1 Xarafka iyo Laxanka – Somali Alphabet and Pronunciation

The Somali alphabet uses Latin script with 21 consonants and 5 vowels. It was standardized in 1972 and is written left to right like English. Pronunciation is phonetic, meaning words are typically pronounced as they are spelled.

1.2 Xarafka Af Soomaaliga – The Somali Alphabet

Letter	Example	Pronunciation Guide
ʾ	abuur	Glottal stop — like a soft pause, similar to in Arabic
B	buug	Like b in “book”
T	tufaax	Like t in “top”
J	jeer	Like j in “job”
KH	khamiis	Like Arabic , a rough “kh” from the throat
DH	dhakhtar	A voiced retroflex (tongue curled back), not found in English
R	roob	Rolled or tapped r , like in Spanish
S	subax	Like s in “sun”
SH	sheeko	Like sh in “shoe”
D	dheer	Like d in “door”
C	cunto	A voiced pharyngeal sound (like in Arabic)
G	guri	Like g in “go”
F	furan	Like f in “fun”
Q	qalin	Deep k sound from the throat (like in Arabic)
K	kabo	Like k in “kite”
L	lacag	Like l in “light”
M	meel	Like m in “man”
N	naag	Like n in “name”
W	webi	Like w in “water”
H	hoy	Like h in “hat”
Y	yar	Like y in “yes”

1.3 Shaqalka – Somali Vowels

Somali has 5 vowels: A, E, I, O, U, and each can be:

- Short (e.g., run – “true/truth”)
- Long (e.g., ruun – “home/settlement”)

Long vowels are marked by doubling the letter (aa, ee, ii, oo, uu) and are pronounced longer and more forcefully. They can change the meaning of a word:

Short	Long	Meaning (Short vs. Long)
u	uu	bur = flour, buur = mountain
a	aa	gal = enter, gaal = non-Muslim
i	ii	bir = metal, biir = increase/multiply

💡 Listen and Repeat

The Somali language is best learned by listening. Repeating after a native speaker helps train your ear to subtle sounds like C, DH, and KH.

1.4 Laxanka iyo Dhawaaqa – Notes on Pronunciation

- ʾ (Glottal stop) represents a brief pause or a sound from the throat, like a soft catch in the breath — similar to Arabic (hamzah).
 - C is not like the English “see” — it’s a voiced pharyngeal sound from the throat (like Arabic).
 - DH is pronounced by curling the tongue back (retroflex). This sound does not exist in English.
 - KH is like Arabic — a rough “kh” from the upper throat.
 - Q is pronounced deep in the throat — not like “k”, but more forceful (like Arabic).
 - R is lightly rolled, similar to Spanish.
 - Double vowels (aa, ee, etc.) are longer and often stressed.

i Tip for Arabic Speakers

If you know Arabic, Somali letters C, Q, KH, and DH will sound familiar to you. But even native Arabic speakers need to adjust their ear for DH, which is distinct from Arabic sounds.

1.5 Isbarasho – Introducing Yourself

Isbarasho wanaagsan waxay ku bilaabataa salaan iyo su’aalo aasaasi ah. Baabkani wuxuu soo bandhigayaa erayada muhiimka ah iyo weedho si aad u isticmaasho marka aad qof cusub la kulanto.

A good introduction begins with greetings and basic questions. This chapter presents essential words and phrases for you to use when meeting someone new.

Start With What You Know

You don't need to memorize every word immediately.

Focus on 5–7 phrases that you can say confidently — like your name, where you're from, and how you're doing. Then build from there.
